The Importance of Water

Like the Planet Earth, the human body is made of 60 - 70% water and is one of the most essential elements to health. Water makes up more than two-thirds of our human body weight and without water; we would die in a few days.

The human brain is made up of 95% water, blood is 82% and lungs 90%. A mere 2% drop in our body's water supply can trigger signs of dehydration: fuzzy short-term memory, difficulty focusing. Mild dehydration is also one of the most common causes of daytime fatigue.

Water is important to the mechanics of the human body. The body cannot work without it. In fact, all the cell and organ functions that make up our entire anatomy and physiology depend on water for their functioning.

Water might be everywhere, but one must never take it for granted. For us to survive so must the rivers, lakes & oceans of Planet Earth.

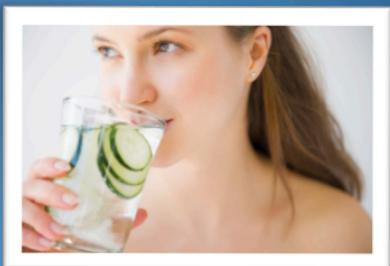

“Water is the driving force of all nature.”

- Leonardo da Vinci
